

Type and Conflict

Myers-Briggs Type Indicator® (MBTI®) Master Class Series workshops are designed for certified practitioners who wish to deepen their understanding of type theory and its practical application.

Conflict can refer to many different types of interactions though it quite often is deemed as an interaction with a negative emotional charge. More often conflict exists because a core element of trust, beliefs, values, authority or passion has been challenged. By illuminating the underlying issue and needs, we have a greater opportunity to defuse that charge and achieve a positive outcome than if we stumble through conflict blindly.

The MBTI® instrument can be used to clarify what is really involved in a conflict situation. By incorporating type awareness and particularly awareness of how people of the sixteen different personality types typically present themselves in a conflict situation, we can better strategise how to approach conflict, communicate when in conflict with others and resolve conflict situations.

This workshop offers MBTI® certified practitioners valuable insights to help individuals and teams improve conflict management skills using psychological type, including practical tools for exploring conflict through the lens of the sixteen types.

You will learn to:

See how type preferences affect conflict

Facilitate exercises and techniques for using type in conflict management training

Use type to identify sources of potential conflict

Create a conflict action plan

Establish conflict management strategies through using case studies and group exercises
